

November 2010

Re: Dr. Fred O. Kussel and the Cool Breeze CT-3 laser

I am a 56 year old, female, who has suffered with ugly toenail fungus since I was 12 years old. Over the years I have tried EVERYTHING to get rid of the ugly raised yellow color embedded in my toenails. While some people will not openly admit it, I will tell you everything I have tried; Pills for 3 months with accompanying blood work, daily rubbing of bacteria cream into the nail bed, soaking all toes in hydrogen peroxide, soaking all toes in alcohol, soaking all toes in soda (hey, I was assured it would work), soaking all toes in bleach, using fingernail polish to cover up the un-attractive appearance, having toenails medically removed, having toenails permanently removed, doing daily scraping and daily soakings, and all of this was to no avail. I believed my feet looked dirty, or like I had been out climbing trees. All the effort I spent trying to fix the problem comes to 44 years of buying products, wasting my time, and spending 44 years trying to figure out how to cover up my ugly toenails. A recent podiatrist said the only solution was to start permanently removing all my nails. My next call was to start that process. UG.

Then, I was bouncing around on the internet, when I saw Dr. Kussel's ad. I clicked on it for more information. All my obvious questions were answered in the ad, so I picked up the phone and called his office. I thought, 'what do I have to loose, my toenails?' I went to my first visit, and after the staff gathered my background information, Dr. Kussel came into the room and examined my feet. He explained thoroughly about the Cool Breeze CT-3 laser, how it worked, how it was different from lower grade lasers that don't get the job done, how the laser would feel, how long it would be before I saw results, he showed me pictures, and answered all my questions. I asked him how soon before I could get the treatment, and he said "right now". I was amazed. I told him I would love to have the treatment, and the chance to change my life. After forty minutes of treatment, I was able to walk out of his office and go home. It was quick, easy, painless, and affordable.

It has only been 6 weeks since my treatment. For the first time in 44 years, I see the 'pink' of my nail beds growing out. Do you have any idea what this means to me? It means no more ugly fungus. It means I can wear toeless shoes and I can wear shoes without the pressure pain on my toenails. My feet look clean. Thank you, Dr. Kussel, and his staff. I didn't think at this age in life, something could make me so happy, but you did!

THANK YOU – from my toes up!

Cynthia Metcalfe

Largo, Florida